On January 12th, 1945, British Commandos struggled ashore on the Japanese held peninsula of Myebon, in Burma.

With grenades and explosives wrapped round them, Japanese suicide troops turned themselves into human bombs and threw themselves at our tanks.

Knowland's words were prophetic. The Japs returned to the attack, but Knowland grabbed a mortar and, firing from the hip, he drove the Japs back. In this action, Knowland was mortally wounded. His bravery won him the V.C.

With grateful thanks to our supporter Darren Little for kindly sharing his photographs of this original Victor Comic, no. 20, dated 8th July 1961 of the Battle of Hill 170, Kangaw, Burma. Darren's grandfather was fighting at the same location of Hill 170 as the subject of this story Lt George Knowland, who earned his VC defending their position.
